

PERTINENT.

One of the best temperance lectures ever delivered fell from the lips of a little child in Covington, Ky., the child of a reformed man. "Father," said she, "are you always going to wear the blue ribbon?"

"I hope so, my dear," was the reply.

"So do I," said the little one.

"Why do you hope so?" asked her father.

"Because I've never had so many strawberries in all my life as I've had since you signed the pledge and put on that blue ribbon."

Men who are not feeding saloon-keepers' children can afford luxuries of their own.

WE must love men, ere to us they will seem worthy of our love.

Our Publications.

We now publish at this office the following Periodicals, Tracts, etc.:
